

Actions for Tree Conservation

Trees, like us, can be affected by stress. They can also suffer from thirst, malnutrition, and abuse. Like us, they breathe, take in nourishment, grow, and die. Trees have enemies and, just like us, are subject to attack by disease.

Fortunately, there are treatments to care for their injuries, prevent disease, counter enemies, and relieve stress. There are specialists who care for trees. But, as with humans, prevention is better than cure.

